Gas stations are a good example of an impersonal attitude. At many stations, attendants have even stopped ① pumping gas. Motorists pull up to a gas station where an attendant is ② enclosed in a glass booth with a tray for taking money. The driver must get out of the car, pump the gas, and ③ walk over to the booth to pay. And customers with engine trouble or a non-functioning heater are ④ usually out of luck. Why? Many gas stations have gotten rid of on-duty mechanics. The skillful mechanic has been replaced by a teenager in a uniform ⑤ which doesn't know anything about cars and couldn't care less.

25. In traditional societies, high status may have been extremely hard to acquire, but it was also comfortingly hard to lose. It was as difficult to stop being a lord as, more darkly, it was to cease being a servant. What mattered was one's identity at birth, rather than anything one might achieve in one's lifetime through the exercise of one's abilities. The great aspiration of modern societies, however, has been to reverse this equation—to strip away both inherited privilege and inherited under-privilege in order to make rank dependent on individual achievement. Status in the current society rarely depends on _____ handed down through the generations.

- ① immediate insight ② learned behavior

- ③ an unchangeable identity ④ available information
- ⑤ a personal accomplishment

30. 다음 글에 드러난 Jonathan의 심경 변화로 가장 적절한 것은?

“Hey,” Jonathan said, his voice causing two small birds to take flight. The woman did not acknowledge him at all but continued to sketch. Frowning, he said a little louder, “Hey, lady.” Again she did not acknowledge him, and Jonathan began to wonder if she might be deaf. Purposefully, he walked up to the woman with every intention of telling her to leave from his backyard. She did not even look up at him until he was standing within a couple of feet of her. Only then did she look up. For a moment Jonathan was struck by the most amazing green eyes he had ever seen. He opened his mouth, but instead of the sharp order he had intended to bark, he asked quietly, “Who are you?” The woman smiled and he felt as if she lit up the world around her.

The above chart shows the economic advantage of transgenic cotton farming over conventional farming in four countries in 2003. ① In all the countries, the seed cost for the transgenic crop was higher than that for the conventional one. However, lower pesticide costs, higher yields, and higher revenues made the transgenic crop more profitable. ② The profit ratio varied from country to country. ③ In Argentina, the ratio of the transgenic seed cost to the cost of the conventional one was higher than that of the other countries. ④ In South Africa, the profit ratio of the transgenic crop to the conventional one was the highest, followed by China. ⑤ Among the nations, Mexico's crop produced the lowest ratios in yield and profit as compared to the conventional one.

I no longer saw (a) the big figure in the same light. Instead of the dull boy who I had hated for a long time, here was someone like me, the human being who had internal value and worth far beyond any externals. It was amazing what I had learned from being forced to run hand-in-hand with someone. For the rest of my life I have never raised a hand against (b) another person.

(B)

At some point during the course of the obligatory mini-marathon that both of us felt anger about, I remember looking over at (c) the large person beside me. His nose was still bleeding a bit. Tears filled his eyes. His giant body slowed him down. Suddenly it struck me that here was a person, not all that different from myself. I guess (d) my unwilling partner thought the same thing because we both looked at each other and began to laugh. In time, we became good friends.

(C)

The gym teacher walked into the room, and recognized that I had been fighting with Matt. He sent us out to the running track. He followed us with a smile on his face and said, "I want both of you to run the track holding each other's hands." The class captain erupted into a roar of laughter, and we were embarrassed beyond belief. Hesitantly, (e) my enemy and I started running. What had earlier been fists were now linked in a strange handshake.

If you don't have time to walk your child to school every day, maybe your child could join a walking bus. This is a set-up by which a group of children are walked to school by adult volunteers along a set route. Like a normal bus, the walking bus follows a timetable, so children can be picked up at scheduled times along the way. The volunteers take turns supervising the "bus." This is attractive because the car stays at home, which reduces _____ outside the school. Also, children are getting exercise in the morning and it's said that if children exercise before class their brains are more ready to learn.

(B)

It is better if children can visit their friends in the village by themselves. Otherwise, you have to walk or drive to drop them off and pick them up, wasting valuable time. We do have to drive them to activities and classes though. For example, my daughter, Katie, has a dance class and my son, Peter, has football, both in neighboring villages. What I try to do is to arrange rides for my kids with other parents. However, I think some people are a bit shy about saying, "I could take them this week, if you could do it next week," but I don't mind asking and people are pleased when I do. It's not just that it saves fuel, time, and money, but it helps to decrease the amount of _____ in the villages, which is also good for the environment.
